Committed giving to persecuted Christians

Strengthen suffering Christians through the gift of a Bible

Rachel, a 61-year-old grandmother, receives strength from reading her Bible in a displaced people camp.

“Strengthen me according to your word” (Psalm 119:28)

“Two of my neighbours were shot and killed ... We had to leave everything we owned and run for our lives,” said “Rachel”, describing the moment she was forced to flee her home village in South-East Asia, when it was bombed by the military. Since then Rachel has lived in a camp for displaced people, where she cares for her ten grandchildren.

Barnabas Fund provided Bibles for Rachel and many other believers in the camp. Now they find it easier to build themselves up in their faith and strengthen one another to cope with daily pressures and continuing dangers.

You can strengthen the faith of persecuted Christians like Rachel through the gift of a Bible. “I am very happy,” she says. “Through this Bible, my life will change again.”

Nearly 30,000 Eritrean Christians fled severe persecution in their homeland, and now struggle to survive in a country where they sought refuge. Poor housing, low pay, hunger and sickness are the norm. Their future is uncertain. Many of the men have been interned for periods, which they believe is an attempt to “break their spirits”. But the gift of a Bible in their language, Tigrinya, will bring comfort and hope. “I am writing with deep joy and gratitude,” wrote one Eritrean to Barnabas Fund after a consignment of Bibles arrived, “Thank you from the bottom of our hearts.”

The Bibles in these boxes will bring strength and joy to persecuted Eritrean Christians

In times of affliction, pressure or persecution, how much strength a believer can gain by reading the Word of God! But many suffering Christians do not have a copy of the Bible. Some are too poor. Some escaped danger or violence, and could not take their Bibles with them when they fled. Some live in countries where the authorities seize and confiscate the Christian Scriptures whenever they find them.

A delivery of Bibles for South Sudanese refugee pastors in Uganda. Previously they were ministering to thousands of fellow-refugees in Uganda without even a copy of God’s Word

There are Christians – even pastors – who have nothing but hand-written copies of certain Bible passages. There are others who share one copy of the Bible between a whole congregation or village.
